The speciacles of a wise-looking gentleman ordering wine at a hotel, looking very learnedly over the list, and gravely choosing champagne as the most fashionable wine for drinking, is a vory indicrons one to a porson who knows how much of it is manufactured. There is more champagne bought, sold, and drank in the city of floaton in a single year then there is manufactured of the pure article in the whole world within the same time. The bogus article which is put forth at much an extravagant price is generally manufactured about as follows: Fifty gallons of vator, two gallons of honey, five ounces of water, two gallons of honey, five ounces of the forthest gaper, five ounces of ground mustard. Boil this mass thirty minutes, edd a quart of youst, and lot if ferment from ten to fourteen days. Add six ounces of bitter almonds, bruised, spirits and graths of paradise to suit convenience. The nore spirit the champagne possesses, the greater will be its body. For coloring use cochaeth half an ounce to the firty gallons, or for plut champagne use at little more cochined.
